

Jabari Whitehead, Ed.D. is the Principal of Chatham Park Elementary School in the Haverford School District and an adjunct professor at Saint Joseph's University of Philadelphia teaching doctoral and masters level courses in Educational Leadership.

With over 20 years of experience as an educator in K-12 in Maryland, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and with 13 years in school leadership, Dr. Whitehead has spent his career dedicated to the growth of his students and community.

Dr. Whitehead received his Doctorate in Educational Leadership from Saint Joseph's University, Class of 2017, with a focus on Transformational Leadership and the Socio-Cognitive Theory of Self-Efficacy. His prior education includes an M.S. in Educational Leadership from Saint Joseph's, Class of 2005, and his B.A. in Elementary Education from Cheyney University of Pennsylvania.

Most recently Dr. Jabari Whitehead has lent his voice to the following...

- Saint Joseph's University Unlimited Learning Webinar Series: The Role of Mental Health in Education and Leadership (9/18/2020)
- The Bridge Between YouTube Channel with Shannon Cassidy: Journey to Authentic Leadership (7/2/2020)
- The Bridge Between YouTube Channel with Shannon Cassidy: Managing the Fear of Returning to School (8/4/2020)
- WMMR Public Affairs Show- Discussion about Virtual Learning (9/6/2020)
- Partnering with and speaking to police departments regarding policing practices in local municipalities

Additionally, Dr. Jabari Whitehead is an avid reader, journals, a "Crossfitter", trail hiker, enjoys any time at the beach, and he coaches girls' youth lacrosse. He is a loving husband and father.

The real truth, Dr. Whitehead refers to himself as a mess and a masterpiece constantly evolving and becoming. Along the way, he lives each day to add value to the lives of others through vulnerability and connection.